Have you ever been invited to something you assumed you already knew what it would be like and decided not to go? Then, the next day, your friends told you how amazing it was, and you realized you had missed out.

That happens a lot with following Jesus.

We often read the Bible as if we were on the outside looking in. The people and the events are inspiring, and we admire them greatly. But we could never imagine being like them.

These heroes aren't in the Bible just for our admiration. They're living proof of what Jesus can do with ordinary, messed-up people like you and me.

Jesus's invitation is personal. He doesn't want you to miss out, to be on the outside looking in. He wants you to be part of His story.

You see, it's one thing to read about all of the adventures in the Bible. To study and understand each person's and event's nuances. It's another thing to live as a continuation of those adventures in the world today.

Jesus doesn't want you to settle for anything less than you were created to be.

And the closer you walk with Him, the more adventurous, thrilling, and fulfilling your life will become.
